Your brother received an email from his friend looking for advice. Your brother has written a reply email, but he has made some mistakes. Proofread his reply email. Underline the mistakes and write the correct words above them.

Dear Dave, I know that you are having some trouble recently. Letting me see if I can help you find some solutions. First of all, I know that you're having some problems at home. Don't worried too much about your parents. It's common that parents quarrel with each other sometimes. When they are both feeling calm, you should tells them gentle how you feel about their arguments. I believe that they will act sensible and try to change their behaviour for the good of the family. You also mentioned that you were not doing good at school. You said that your sister often listens to music noisy while you are trying to study. Asks her not to do that on weekday evenings. Going to study in the library if that doesn't work. You should be able to focus on study there peaceful. Also, you shouldn't get plenty of sleep the night before an exam. Don't staying up too late! I haven't forgotten about your problems with your best friend Tony. Honest, I'm not sure what's going on with him. Maybe he is having problems at home too. At the moment, you should gave him some distance. It's important that you should make him talk about this if he doesn't want to. I know all of these problems have seriously stressed you out. You should finding some healthier hobbies to give yourself a good break. Go for a hike or join a club. But remember that you should turn to drugs for pleasure! If you ever need to talk, just gave me a call. Yours sincerely, Jerry
